MARRIED :- At the residence of the bride's parents, Thursday evening, April 27th, 1893, by Rev. S. E. Busser, Mr. George E. Cazaly and Miss Louise Waters, both of this city. When two hearts, heretofore wandering in separate paths, have found each other, and a new home is instituted, around which the ivy of promise and hope is entwined, we delight to give our approval, and chronicle the event, as a golden event of our social history. The above contracting parties are well and favorably known in Dodge City. Mr. Cazaly has for a number of years been a reliable and highly esteemed employe of Santa Fe company. He has made many friends, not only among his co-laborers, but also among the citizens, and his genial nature has made a pleasant impression on every one. Miss Waters has been the chief delivery clerk in the post office so long, that every one who receives mail at Dodge City, will miss her sunny presence from the window. By her winsome ways in society, and her cheerful acceptance of every task for the good of others, and active influence towards a brighter and more hopeful aspect of life, she has drawn around her a large circle of friends, who unite in wishing her much joy. The wedding was quiet and informal, yet surrounded by all those aids and embellishments, that give an air of romance to marriage. The bride was attired in white silk, trimmed with lace and ribbons, and the bridal veil and wreath, of richest design and most elegant finish, came from far off Germany. The ceremony used was made to cluster about the ring, which by its beautiful symbolism, taught the true objects of matrimony, and united their hearts in an indissoluble relationship. John O'Day, of the Santa Fe Company, was groomsman, and Miss Alvina Berg was bridesmaid, and it was remarked, that with such able and attractive support, any one could get married. Miss Anna Owen played a wedding march from one of the masters of music, in the refrain of which the words were spoken that made two hearts one and started a new home in Dodge City. After the ceremony, the guests were invited to the dining room, where was prepared a most sumptuous repast, with a display of fruits and flowers and artistically served viands of every description, that every one was delighted and good cheer predominated. The presents made to the bride were numerous and elegant. A handsomely engraved gold watch, a deed to a city lot, ingeniously carved furniture, silver ware and souvenirs from friends here and in the old country, were laid at her feet with congratulations in the sweetest words. The newly married couple left on the afternoon train for Chicago, where amidst the pleasure of the opening of the great World's Fair, and under the influence of the mighty achievements of a wonder-working century, they will begin to realize that,

"Marriage rightly understood,
Gives to the virtuous and the good,
A paradise below."
